Only a penny

I was waiting at the supermarket checkout. The woman in front of me had lots of things in her cart. She was very careful and checked the prices on the screen when the assistant passed them over the scanner. A pair of tights was 99p. The woman stopped the assistant. "That's wrong!" she said. "They're on offer this week for 98p." The assistant wasn't sure, so she called the manager. The manager called back five minutes later and said the woman was correct. So the assistant finished scanning the woman's shopping. When the total price appeared on the screen, the woman paid with some notes. As the assistant was giving her the change, a penny fell out of her hand and rolled onto the floor. The assistant got down on her knees to look for it. "Oh, don't worry about it," the woman told her. "It's only a penny."

A good trick!

Task

Read the text and find out what the words and phrases below mean in German. Tick (✓) the correct answer. Be careful: the meaning in the text isn't always the 'usual' meaning.

Andy Douglas wasn't the world's best magician. In fact, he wasn't really very good at all. Andy knew this himself. He was only a mediocre magician, but that was good enough. He worked on a small cruise ship and he had been doing the same show for ten years. The audiences liked him and were satisfied with the show. There was a new audience almost every week and so Andy didn't have to try out new material. He had been churning out the same old tricks for ten years.

But not everyone in the audience was happy. Near the stage was a big cage with a parrot in it. Its name was Einstein because it was so clever. Einstein had watched every one of Andy's shows for ten years and had worked out all the tricks. He had also started to give them away to the audience. When Andy made a bouquet of flowers disappear, the parrot would sing out: "Behind his back! Behind his back!"

This made Andy really mad, but he couldn't fight back because not only was the parrot popular with the audiences and the crew but it also belonged to the captain of the cruise ship. Andy just had to grin and put up with it.

One day in the Caribbean there was a big storm and the cruise ship ran into a reef and sank. Andy swam to a broken mast and hung on. The parrot was also on the mast. Einstein and Andy stared at each other and Einstein stepped back out of Andy's reach. Neither of them said a word for two days. On the morning of the third day the parrot looked at the magician and said, "OK. I see you. Where did you hide the secret?"
